Who are we?

Formed in 2003, the AAPT is the professional body for anatomical pathology technologists in both NHS and public mortuaries. The AAPT is recognised as the principle guiding voice for all matters related to anatomical pathology technology.

The AAPT is committed to working with the appropriate authorities and organizations to help ensure, and improve, the professional, educational and practical standards for technologists across the United Kingdom and beyond.

The AAPT has liaised with all relevant stakeholders within the profession and has been asked to comment on every major consultation that will effect the working lives of anatomical pathology technologists.

Engaging with the commercial sector

The AAPT hold an annual conference on professional and technical issues. The conference provides a simulating day of lectures and a night-time social event.

At conference there is a trade exhibition and other sponsorship opportunities for commercial companies. As a Company Member of the AAPT you would be entitled to a 15% discount on the trade exhibitor fee and have priority booking arrangements.

A regional network of the AAPT is also growing with regular events planned for local members and non-members alike.

Benefits of Company Membership

The AAPT is aware of the vast contribution that the private sector have made to anatomical pathology technology and are keen to promote your company through the following benefits of membership:

- ⇒ Company listed in a new on-line commercial directory
- ⇒ Within this new section of the website there will be an opportunity to announce up to 3 product & technological developments per annum
- ⇒ 15% AAPT conference discount
- ⇒ Priority booking at all AAPT events
- ⇒ Direct marketing to budget planners within the mortuary sector

Visitors to the AAPT website

The AAPT website –www.aaptuk.org is an excellent resource tool for technologists.

In 2008 the AAPT website received over 700,000 hits with approximately 20,000 unique visitors and represents and is an ideal arena for the commercial sector to promote their products.
